

Largest ever climate change protest held across Australia

Australia's largest ever community protest for action on climate change was held on Saturday 12 November, with more than 90,000 people taking part in Walk Against Warming in every major city and dozens of regional centres across the country.

More than 15,000 people marched through Sydney's CBD for Walk Against Warming behind the banner - Australia says the Climate Can't Wait - sending a message to leaders in Copenhagen that they, their children and the planet cannot wait any longer for strong action on climate change. More than 40,000 people marched in Melbourne and up to 15,000 people participated in Brisbane.

A big thank you to all those who joined us in Sydney! You made a powerful statement that the Australian Government must be a leader not a straggler for a strong, fair and binding global agreement on climate action.

You can view television news coverage of Sydney's Walk Against Warming here .

Check out the colour and spectacle of the Sydney Walk at our Flickr photostream .

If you have any footage or photos you'd like to share, email them here (maximum file size: 5MB) or send on disk to Nature Conservation Council, PO Box 137 Newtown NSW 2042.